Ozaukee County, Wisconsin

County Seal - History & Background

Ozaukee County, Wisconsin was established in 1853, by the State Legislature. Ozaukee County is Wisconsin's smallest county geographically, but it has a rich history.

Ozaukee County was home to a number of Native American people such as the Menomonee, Potawatomi, Sauk and Fox. Later, the area became home to many ethnic groups such as Yankees, Irish, German, and Luxembourgers. The last covered bridge in Wisconsin is also located in Ozaukee County.

Until 2006, many different logos and seals represented the various Ozaukee County Departments. After years of discussion, drafting, and debate, one single logo was approved by the Ozaukee County Board conveying a common and meaningful symbol that is displayed prominently on all vehicles, stationary, and business cards.

The new logo symbolizes the features of Ozaukee County that have attracted its 85,000-plus residents: the County's unique shape; the vivid blue coloring for our proximity to the great natural resource of Lake Michigan; and the brilliant yellow and orange coloring representing the English translation of the Sauk Indian Tribe, 'Ozaukee, people of the yellow earth'. Also prominent in the newly designed logo is the American flag, following the United States' Congress acknowledgment of Ozaukee County as the official birth place of Flag Day and, our historic County Court House, the single most significant piece of architecture within our borders.
